Sex Trafficking

Thank you! Thank you to the legislature for its support of $2 million to address sex trafficking of youth that was in the last state budget. Thank you also for any support you have offered for the past good legislation that is now helping to raise awareness and place more emphasis on punishing traffickers more than the victims.

Immediate Request: Please support the full $2 million for FY 2017-18 and $4 million for FY 2018-19 (a total of $6 million) in the proposed state budget to prevent sex trafficking and to help victims of sex trafficking. We would like the work with the newly formed statewide anti-sex trafficking task force and the new facility to house rural teenage female victims of sex trafficking to thrive, expand, and effectively impact this problem.

For the Future: Please support future bills that decriminalize youth under 18 who are caught for the first time in an act of prostitution. Minnesota, Illinois and several other states have passed such legislation and it has been very successful. As we have more services for victims of sex trafficking, let's focus on offering them services and not re-victimizing them by treating them as criminals.

Judge Ramona Gonzalez of La Crosse at a legislative hearing in 2016 talked about the problem of sex trafficking of youth in our state. She said there is a lot of good will among judges when working with young people caught in prostitution, but that charges such as "lewd and lascivious behavior" sometimes goes into a youth's record in place of prostitution. She had a list of examples of charges that can be and have been made against victims.

Wisconsin Sex Trafficking of Minors

It is difficult to determine how many youth are being sex trafficked in Wisconsin because even though it is pervasive, it is very covert. To date (2017) cases have been reported across the state in every county, and as awareness of sex trafficking increases professionals are recognizing more youth who are victims of trafficking. Jan Miyazaki, the director of Madison's Project Respect, said that in her work with local women in the sex trade, she encounters between 50-75 cases a year involving force, fraud or coercion. A community educator who works with Milwaukee minors in the sex trade said she has come into contact with more than 100 young people in the past year that she believes fit the definition of human trafficking victims.

Milwaukee was referred to as "The Harvard of Pimp School," in the November 2, 2015 article in The Guardian. However, many of the traffickers have moved into suburban and rural areas. The Internet as well as public places are used for recruiting. It is common for traffickers to spend significant time tracking potential girls and boys for prey and they often work in teams.
