Have you ever wanted to be an advocate for issues you care about, but struggle or stumble to put your passion into words? ...or perhaps you're not sure about the most effective way to reach out to your elected and appointed officials.

This half-day workshop will equip you with a blend of teaching and practical exercises so you're ready to step into the halls of power (even if they're in your own hometown). Our presenter is a seasoned advocate and expert in the field who wants to help you use your political and social capital for transformation. This day will help you think carefully about who you're advocating for and why, and begin to develop your advocacy strategy. Get ready to present yourself as the grounded faith leader you are. Learn how to shape your story for impact, and prepare yourself to speak to the people who can make policy changes happen.

This is an ideal workshop for those who are new to People of Faith United for Justice Advocacy Day (scheduled for April 11, 2019), but will benefit anyone interested in being an effective advocate with public officials for policy needs.
